

300,000 POUNDS OF OLD CLOTHES SENT HAD CLEVER PLAN FOR MAKING MONEY

More than 300,000 pounds of used clothing in 2,100 bales have started to Europe, as the first shipment of over 10,000 tons of garments and bedding collected by the American Red Cross in its recent country-wide drive. Two thousand additional bales lie at the docks in New York harbor awaiting transportation.

The Potomac division reported yesterday that forty-three of the 195 chapters in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia have shipped 174,136 pounds. In many cities and towns where the drive had to be postponed on account of epidemics or local conditions the campaign is now on, so that there is every indication that this division will furnish more than its quota of 800,000 pounds.

Two shipments will be sent out each week from New York until the total amount collected throughout the United States will either be over $100,000 or on its way. Clothing is sorted, packed, and baled for shipment in 150-pound bales. Fifty workers at the Brooklyn warehouse, where these garments are handled, keep them pouring through a funnel into the sorting chamber, where they are divided, made into bundles, and inclosed in burlap. The electric press turns out a bale every five minutes.

A fraud order denying her the use of the mails and thereby winding up an ingenious scheme to obtain money under false pretenses has been issued by the Postoffice Department against Miss Frances Kirby, who is also variously styled E. F. Kirby, Mrs. E. F. Kirby, P. Kirby, Frances Reckenbell, E. Kirby Reckenbell, Mrs. G. E. Reckenbell, and Mrs. George Reckenbell, of Hempstead, N. Y.

According to the report of a post of a deceased clergyman. For many years she has made it a practice to secure through the mails merchandise from business houses throughout the country without any intention of paying for it. She visits residences in Hempstead and nearby towns, selling the articles thus obtained.

Friends have tried in vain to prevail upon her to give up the practice. The department then stepped in and denied her the use of the mails.

They were married in Alexandria, Va., April 18, 1911, and have two children whose custody is requested by the wife. Attorney William K. Quinter appears for Mrs. Drew.

Four hundred thousand residents of the District of Columbia obey Federal laws, but these 400,000 have no local self-government, no Presidential Vote, no national representation.
